Tarka home learning

In English this week, we wrote our own stories about a robot who had lost a body part. We chose to either write about him losing his antennae, leg or hand, and came up with our own ideas about what his friends were using it for. The stories were fantastic!

In maths, we continued to recap some key skills, focusing on addition and subtraction.

In topic this week, we have looked at the Olympics. We learnt a bit about the London and Tokyo games, how the games started in Greece and all of the events now involved in the games. We then thought about which event we would most like to do if we were an Olympic athlete. In ICT, we continued our learning on programming using ScratchJr. In our lessons we thought about what buttons we would need to use to program our character to a certain place and how we can simplify the code.

Home learning

Choose your favourite Olympic event and research an athlete that will be taking part in that event at Paris 2024.

Reading

We expect everyone to be reading for a least five minutes a day.
